Introduction

About Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen and Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler (The solution of the enigma Adolf Hitler), [1959].¹

The revival of the trade in (counterfeit) Hitler paintings in the late 1950s is marked by the publication of Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler (The solution of the enigma Adolf Hitler), by far the most bizarre collection of concoctions about Hitler. Next to stories it contains reproductions of fake Hitler paintings, drawings, handwritten letters, documents and even a poem. Fake, not forgeries – as none of the presented material resembles any authentic painting or document. The book was published by the Verlag zur Förderung wissenschaftlicher Forschung (Publishing house for the promotion of scientific research) – a publishing house which published next to Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler no other books in the 1950s.²

Only a few³ noticed that the book was fraudulent. Some wrote that the documents (all marked “HBH”) in it were forgeries, but coincidentally always one of the documents presented in the book that supported somebody's personal theory had to be authentic after all.⁴

For more than sixty years this book has influenced a lot of biographers and historians. By doing so it corrupted historiography itself. Quotes were used, many times without any critical remarks, without anybody ever asking: what was the purpose of this book? And: who was this Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen?

1 Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler. Der Versuch einer Deutung der geheimnisvollsten Erscheinung der Weltgeschichte. Verlag zur Förderung wissenschaftlicher Forschung. [1959]. 256 p, with plates. Edition of 50.000 ex,[according to Von Müllern; probably exaggerated] Online: <https://archive.org/details/RaetselAdolfHitler>

2 There was a publishing house called “Gesellschaft zur Förderung wissenschaftlicher Forschung”, which published in 1958 the dissertation of Ralf Richard Körner, entitled: So haben sie es damals gemacht : die Propagandavorbereitungen zum Österreich-Anschluss durch das Hitlerregime 1933 bis 1938. https://www.worldcat.org/title/so-haben-sie-es-damals-gemacht-die-propagandavorbereitungen-zum-osterreich-anchluss-durch-das-hitlerregime-1933-bis-1938/oclc/693041693&referer=brief_results

Given the manner in which way “Dr. Johannes”misused in the 1930s the names of existing publishing houses for his own publications, it is throughout possible that he did the same in 1959.

3 E.g. Dr. Wilfried Kugel. Ergänzende Bemerkungen zu Otto Prokop. Zeitschrift für Anomalistik. Emmendingen, Band 13 (2013). Pages 410-411. https://web.archive.org/web/20210427072609/https://www.anomalistik.de/images/pdf/zfa/zfa2013_3_405_diskussionen.pdf [accessed 27-04-2021].

4 See Fooled by the lies, page 23 and following. The fact that already in 1991 alleged Hitler documents with HBH markings were convincingly debunked was ignored by many later authors. The debunking was done by Charles Hamilton (at the time of world fame and regarded as a reliable handwriting expert) in his book The Hitler Diaries, Fakes that Fooled the World.

The book

Die Lösung des Rätsels is basically an introduction to his next book (which was never published), in which he would present his theories about a new anti-democratic movement, without Hitler. Die Lösung ends therefore with howling cries from the nonexistent “International Working Group of Historical-Philosophical Associations”: “Away with the rule of the political parties! Away with the obsolete always failing present-day political systems!”⁵

Who was this man?

Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen (or rather Von Münchhausen) was a peculiar swindler. He was probably the only one who made Hitler forgeries not for the money, but for his insane right-wing extremist ideas. It is throughout possible that he wanted to play a leading role in a new neo-Nazi movement – without Hitler of course, as Hitler was quite dead by then.

Dr. Johannes's real name was Hans Müllern.⁶ He was born on June 24, 1904 in Vienna.⁷ He died on January 18, 1996 in Munich. He was buried at the Nordfriedhof in Munich, January 23, 1996.⁸

At the age of twenty he was already active as a Truppenführer (troop leader) of Austrian right-wing extremist monarchists.¹⁰ In 1930 he was a small-role actor, poet, singer and journalist.¹¹ In 1932 he was politically active as Bertriebsrat (work councillor) of the Marischka-Bühnen (Marischka-Theatre) and tried to manoeuvre it in the radical right direction of the *Heimwehr*¹² with fraudulent tricks. He was sacked because of this and fought against that decision in court.¹³

6 As is stated on the facsimile of the 1953 notarial document presented on pages 153-154 of Die Lösung des Rätsel. This is an authentic edified statement, misused to authenticate forged material. Also newspaper articles from 1950 make it clear that Hans Müllern was the same as Dr. Johannes from Müllern-Schönhausen – see Swindler, page 12.

7 There's conflicting information about Müllern's birth year. According to H. Giebisch, L. Pichler und K. Vancsa. Kleines österreichisches Literaturlexikon. Hollinek, Wien, 1948 it was 1901. In newspaper reports from 1950 his age is given as 46. This corresponds with the birth year 1904, given in these books: Hans F. Prokop. Österreichisches Literaturhandbuch 1974. Jugend und Volk, Wien (etc.), 1974; Ruiss Gerhard und Johannes A. Vyoral. Literarisches Leben in Österreich. Handbuch 1988. Interessengemeinschaft Österreichischer Autoren, Wien, 1988. In the death announcement signed by his widow 1904 is mentioned as his year of birth.

The poet

In 1932-1934, Viennese newspapers reported that Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen had received the 1931 Schiller Prize for his poetry collection Ein Bilderbuch. Erlebtes Erträumtes Erdachtes (Verlag Metrographik 1931).¹⁴ Their source? Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen, who had stamped a text mentioning this price on the cover of the book.

The book was however a self-published book. The Verlag (publishing house) Metrographik was a solo project by Dr. Johannes. He made a silly mistake (a common thing for swindlers to do): he dated the foreword 'Christmas 1931'. Which left the imaginary jury of the imaginary Schiller Prize only five days for the judgement of the book.

14 Buchanzeigen. Wiener Zeitung, Wien, 21-09-1932, page 8. Nachtrag zur Rubrik Neue Bücher. Wiener Salonblatt, Wien, 01-01-1934, page 11.

He even faked the prize award. This fake award surfaced in 2017.¹⁵ It was an original Schiller plaque made by Otto Hofner,¹⁶ on which Dr. Johannes had on the back side this text engraved:

SCHILLERPREIS
FÜR DAS JAHR 1931-1932
Schiller Prize for the year 1931-1932

JOHANNES von MÜLLERN-SCHÖNHAUSEN
Handed to the poet ...

VOM ÖSTERREICHISCHEN
BUND der SCHILLERFREUNDE
By the Austrian Association of Schiller Friends

Collection Jaap van den Born

When he did so, he rectified his first mistake; the Prize was now allegedly awarded for the years 1931-1932. An "Österreichisches Bund der Schillerfreunde" didn't exist in 1932, however. And neither did the Austrian Schiller Prize for poetry.

In 1932 "Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen" published his second poetry collection, Das Füllhorn (The cornucopia), with a foreword dated 'Christmas 1932'. This work contains two forewords. In the foreword by the poet himself some real existing people are named. Then he thanks two untraceable gentlemen of the 'Association of Schiller Friends'.

15 It was in 2017 offered on e-Bay, allegedly originating from the estate of a Viennese antiquarian. It was bought by Jaap van den Born.

Vorwort.

Mit aufrichtiger Freude komme ich dem Wunsche meines ehemaligen, lieben Hörers und Schülers Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen nach, ihm für den zweiten Band seiner Dichtungen ein Vorwort zu schreiben.

Ich hatte wiederholt Gelegenheit aus seinem mit dem Schillerpreis ausgezeichneten ersten Band in literarischen Kreisen die Wirkung der klangschönen und gedankentiefen Gedichte zu erproben; ganz besonders aber fiel mir der grosse, nachhaltige Erfolg auf, den ich in der Wiener Universität bei einer Vorlesung erster neuzeitlicher Dichter mit dem Vortrag mehrerer seiner Gedichte erzielte.

Auch die nun vorliegenden neuen Gedichte zeigen wiederum schönste Architektur, edelste Form und sind wie die früheren für den Vortragenden dankbarste Aufgaben.

Meine allerherzlichsten Zukunftswünsche begleiten den jungen Dichter auf seiner Laufbahn, die zielfroh nach oben in das Reich der höchsten Schönheit und Wahrheit führt.

Wien, November 1932.

FERDINAND STEIL.

The other foreword is allegedly written by his alleged former teacher Ferdinand Steil, lector of Deutsche Vortragskunst (German reciting art) of the Vienna University.¹⁷ If it is indeed written by Steil, then Steil must have been deceived by what Von Müllern-Schönhausen claimed about the Schiller Prize and what the newspapers, based on Müllern's claim, had written about it.

17 Given the utter unreliability of Hans Müllern/Dr. Johannes nothing he wrote can be taken for granted.

Ferdinand Steil however did exist. He was a well known theatre actor, professor and lector at the Universities of Vienna and Graz. At the age of 64 he committed suicide , November 30, 1936, by throwing himself for a train.

(....) Professor Steil war 64 Jahre alt und eine in Literatur- und Kunstkreisen sehr geschätzte Persönlichkeit.

In 1933 he published his third poetry collection, Die Kleine Schenke (The small tavern). This time the publisher's name is Metro-Graphik. Even though at that time he was working (under his own name Hans Müllern) for disguised Nazi newspapers, he dedicated this book to Dr. Viktor Altmann.

Viktor Altmann (1900-1960) was a Jewish monarchist activist, co-founder of the Heimwehr,¹⁸ which at this time had become politically active and split in supporters of the Austro fascist government and Nazi's. Müllern became a Nazi, while Altmann was an ardent anti-Nazi. Altmann fled after the Anschluss (1938) to England.¹⁹ (The ideology Müllern preached in Die Lösung, in which he denied he had ever been a Nazi, was in fact a return to his pre-Nazi anti-democratic ideas from the monarchists and Heimwehr.)

Finally Dr. Johannes publishes Eine Sommerreise (A Summer Voyage) – his last collection of poetry.

Hans Müllern a.k.a. Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen was not a very successful poet, but skilful he was. The writing of the alleged Hitler poem 'Ich gehe manchmal...' (a falsification published in his 1959 book²⁰) must have been therefore quite easy for him.

Ich gehe manchesmal in rauhen Nächten
Zur WOTANseiche in den stillen Hain,
Mit dunklen Mächten einen Bund zu flechten —
Die Runen zaubert mir der Mondenschein.
Und alle, die am Tage sich erfrechten,
Sie werden vor der Zauberformel klein!
Sie ziehen blank — doch statt den Strauß zu fechten,
Erstarren sie zu Stalagmitgestein.
So scheiden sich die Falschen von den Echten —
Ich greife in das Fibelnest hinein
Und gebe dann den Guten und Gerechten
Mit meiner Formel Segen und Gedeih'n.

In einer Rauhnacht 1915 im Felde

I often go on bitter nights
To Wotan's oak in the quiet glade
With dark powers to weave a union —
The runic letters the moon makes with its magic spell
And all who are full of impudence during the day
And made small by the magic formula!
They draw shining steel – but instead of going into combat
They solidify into stalagmites.
So the false ones part from the real ones –
I reach into a nest of words
And then give to the good and just
With my formula blessings and prosperity.

Translation by John Toland²¹

The content and message of this fake Hitler poem is different from his other poems for which he gave himself the "well deserved" Schiller Prize: he shows himself in these as a very pious and religious person. Eine Sommerreise is about a man who travels around through the seasons in the World, like in the Odyssee (in one poem even Sirens passed by) but when reading only the first and the last poem the book can be summarized with Schillers lines from Das Lied von der Glocke, on which it clearly was based:

20 Die Lösung des Rätsels Adolf Hitler, page 210.

“Vom Mädchen reisst sich stolz der Knabe
Er stürmt ins Leben wild hinaus
Durchmisst die Welt am Wanderstabe
Fremd kehrt er heim ins Vaterhaus”

“From maiden breaks the lad so proudly,
And into life so wild doth roam,
Throughout the world he wanders widely.
As stranger, seeks his father's home”²²

The book was published by the Wiener Graphische Werkstätten. A publishing date is not mentioned in the book, but the Wiener Graphische e Werkstätten are unknown: Verlag Wiener Graphischen Werkstätte was a prestigious publisher that was famous for publishing poetry from young poets and young authors with beautiful publications and ceased to exist in 1930.

It had by then not published poetry for years and certainly not this collection. The Von Müllern-Schönhausen book was clearly bound by an amateur, with glue residu, and to quickly removed from the press to dry.

Nazi past

Hans Müllern/Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen had also a past as a Nazi activist.

In 1934 he was editor and publisher of Depeschen (Messages), an Austrian Nazi daily newspaper that was banned on February 10, 1934. Then, on March 17, 1934 another newspaper appears, Nachtkurier (Night messenger). In the first issue no publisher or editors are mentioned.

The back page of this first issue carries an appeal that looks very similar to the appeal at the end of Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler. In later issues the name of the publisher and editor is mentioned however: Hans Müllern.

Then, in 1938, the Nazi newspaper Völkischer Beobachter and other newspapers report about a big gathering in the Wiener Theater, to celebrate the Anschluss and praise the Führer.²³ On the program drama, songs and speeches. The master of ceremonies: a certain Hans von Müllern-Schönhausen. The play performed on this evening is written by Hans Bleyer-Härtl, who was also present, and introduced to the audience.²⁴

Bleyer-Härtl²⁵ was a well-known Nazi lawyer (and also a poet, playwright and mountaineer) who had defended Nazi terrorists in the years before the annexation of Austria, when the Austrian Nazi party, its newspapers and books were banned. In 1939 Bleyer-Härtl published the book Ringen um Recht und Freiheit (Struggle for justice and freedom) a history of the Nazis in Austria until the Anschluss. In this book he tells how Austrian Nazis²⁶ succeeded in publishing their newspaper. As soon as one title got banned, another one was started. He names in this book a 'Hans Müllern-Schönikirch' as one of the involved editors – which shows that Bleyer-Härtl knew Hans Müllern, but not so well that Bleyer-Härtl remembered the name correctly.²⁷

It is notable that in 1933, when he published and wrote as a Nazi under his own name, he not only dedicated as "Von Müllern-Schönhausen" his book Die Kleine

25 Dr. Hans Bleyer-Härtl (1880-1942). More about Hans Bleyer-Härtl see: Jaap van den Born and Bart FM Droog. Bloemen van het Kwaad. Droog Magazine, Eenrum, 06-01-2017; <https://www.bartfmdroog.com/droog/dd/bleyer-hartl.html>

26 He names especially Alfred Eduard Frauenfeld and Dr. Bernwieser.

27 The familyname "Müllern", in contrast to "Müller", is not very common; even more unusual is the combination Müllern-Schönhausen. There existed a Nazi photographer Rudolf Müller-Schönhausen – he was a German, not related in any way to Hans Müllern. Rudolf Müller-Schönhausen was the author of Köpfe aus der Gefolgschaft des Führers. Alte Kämpfer [Deutsche Meisteraufnahmen, Nr. 5]. F. Bruckmann, München, 1937.

Schenke to a Jewish right wing politician, but also published a poem in the ardent anti-Nazi and even more ardent anti-semitic newspaper Österreichischer Abendblatt. And also wrote a hymn, dedicated to the by Mussolini supported dictator Dolfuss.²⁸

From this it becomes quite clear that Hans Müllern had some experience in masking the truth.

Pub owner

About 1935 Hans Müllern owned the Café Wallenstein, in the Brigittenau district in Vienna. In 1937 he sued a former guest, who according to Müllern ordered on a single evening "21 glasses of liquor, 48 bottles of beer, 32 cups of coffee, 10 coffee with cognac, 1 coffee with a double shot cognac and 500 cigarettes", without paying the bill.

The guest, a Herr Eder, admitted that he was a heavy drinker, but denied having ordered all these drinks. The judge acquitted him.

Interestingly, Müllern declared in the court room that he had in the meantime sold the pub and had become a writer.²⁹

1945-1946

It is not (yet) known what Hans Müllern did during the war years. But shortly after the war he reemerges in the press.

In December 1945 and August 1946 he is mentioned as 'Schönhausen', songwriter.³⁰ In May 1946 he leads a musical performance.³¹ He's also participating, as are 1800 others, in a contest for the writing of a new national Austrian anthem.³² But all these activities are not well received³³; his name disappears from the newspapers after 1946, until, in 1950...

Swindler

In 1950 Hans Müllern was arrested on suspicion of fraud. Müllern, named as a “failed writer” (verkrachter Schriftsteller) was apparently involved in a scheme that involved issuing forged residence permits to Hungarian refugees, so they could obtain the Austrian nationality. Müllern and his accomplice were paid 5000 to 20,000 Schilling for each fraudulent permit.

He was accused of being involved in five cases.³⁴

In another article Müllern's address is mentioned: Nußdorferstrasse 46, 9. Bezirk, Vienna. Müllern gave his accomplice Sebastian Pichler 500 Schilling per forged permit, so he made a nice profit of 4,500 to 19,500 Schilling on each transaction.³⁵

Anno 2021 this would amount from 3,750 to 16,270 euro.³⁶

Hans Müllern = Dr. Johannes Müllern, Librettist = Schönhausen

In yet another article Hans Müllern is named as the 46 year old librettist Dr. Johannes Müllern, and:

Dr. Müllern, who is supposedly writing under the pseudonym “Schönhausen”, is largely unknown to literary circles. It is said that he wrote the lyrics of the operetta “Mask in Blue”. He lives with his wife, who works as an assistant for a Viennese doctor, in a small apartment at the Nussdorfstrasse.³⁷

The newspaper article was however wrong on the operetta: Müllern did not write the lyrics of it. That was done by Heinz Hentschke and Günther Schwenn.³⁸ He did however wrote a revue together with Thomas Peter: “Österreich über alles.³⁹

At the notary

It is (yet) unknown if Müllern was convicted, and if so, for how long he was in prison. What is known however is that in May 1953 Müllern was a free man.

On May 7, 1953, Hans Müllern went to notary Dr. Leopold Pauly, to open a capsule attached to a mandrake. According to Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen this capsule contained predictions allegedly written on parchment by the clairvoyant Hanussen for Hitler.

The notary made a certified statement of these predictions – a statement that says nothing about the authenticity of the texts on the parchment (or paper). The notary simply recorded what the texts were.

In Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler a facsimile of this notarial certificate is published. By doing so, Hans Müllern betrayed himself, as shown by this fragment:

In text: "Es erscheint der mir persönlich bekannte Herr Dr. Hans Müllern, Schriftsteller in Wien, IX. Nussdorferstrasse 65." (To me came Mr. Dr. Hans Mullern, author, whom I know personally, Nussdorferstrasse 65, 9th District, Vienna).⁴⁰

The same address and the same name and the same profession as the man identified as Schönhausen in one of the news articles from 1950.

Die Lösung des Rätsel's (1959)

Then, in 1959, Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler is published. Hans Müllern used his old pseudonym Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen for it – a name he probably keeps on using until his death.

In his book he presents the 'HBH Collection': a collection of paintings, photos, documents and letters, written and signed by Adolf Hitler, each with a stamp of the collector 'HBH'. Who was the person behind 'HBH' explained Müllern in the 1970s to Hitler biographer John Toland: Hans Bleyer Härtl.⁴¹

Müllern claims in the book that HBH gave his Hitler-collection to him to safeguard, when he went off to the front. According to a letter allegedly written by HBH and reproduced in the book, HBH knew that Von Müllern-Schönhausen wasn't a Nazi, but was a honest man.

Conveniently, Bleyer-Härtl died in 1942, in a hospital in Vienna.⁴²

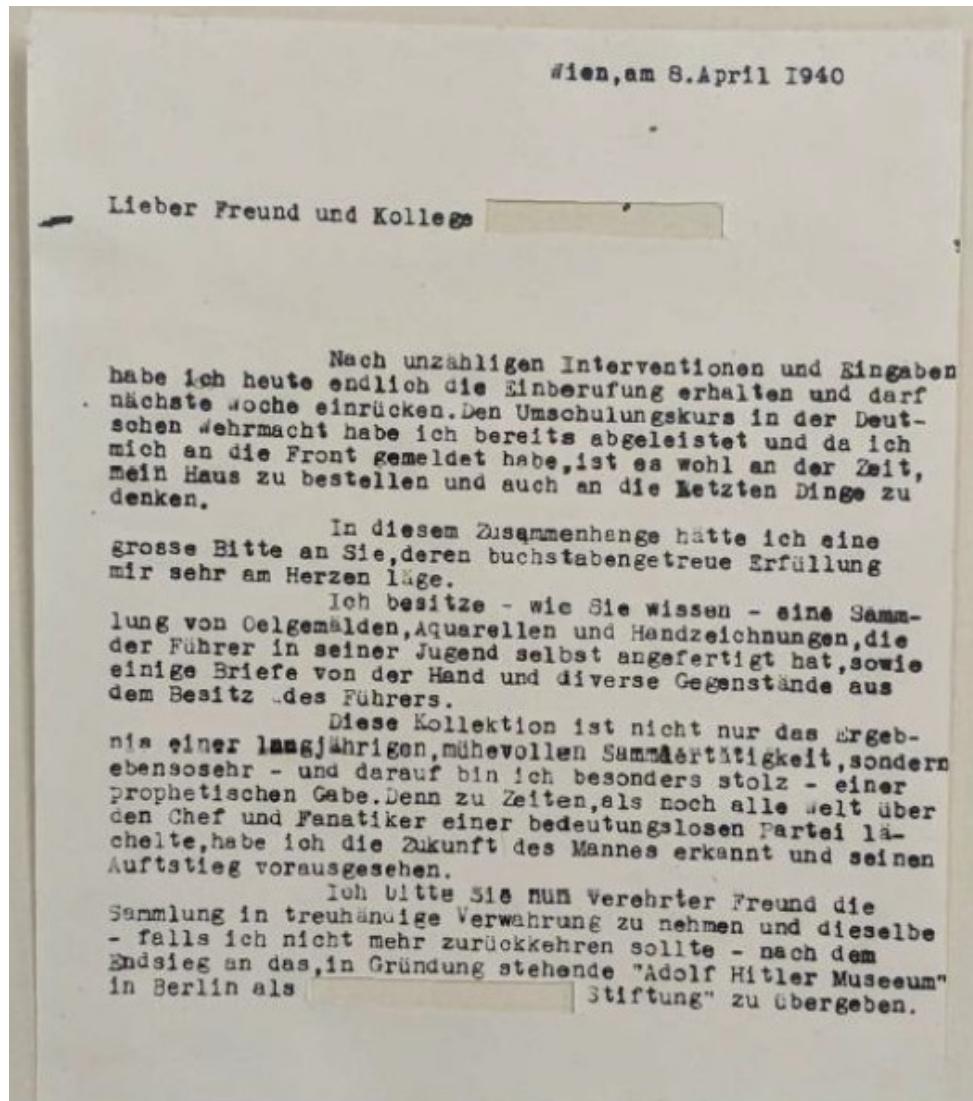

Only a complete idiot would take the collection and the letters seriously: the "stamps" were obviously not stamped, but drawn (one even is lettered 'HBB'); several HBH letters are dated after the death of the collector and the signatures of Hitler are clear forgeries – they are all the same from 1915 to 1945, whereas authentic Hitler signatures changed when he grew older.

Incidentally, Die Lösung des Rätsel's was the second version of the book with the HBH collection. Since 1991 a copy of the typescript of the first version, allegedly

"The Hitler letter appears on p. 195 of Müllern-Schönhausen's book, Die Lösung des Rätsels Adolf Hitler, a confusing hodgepodge of fact and fantasy. At the same time I am convinced that his collection of original Hitler documents, artifacts and paintings is, for the most part, genuine. Although he took me to the Vienna bank where the documents are stored and made photo copies of a number of the items, he did not show the originals. He said he was given the items by Hans Bleyer-Härtl, an Austrian Nazi who was the lawyer for the Dolfuss murderers. After the Anschluss, Bleyer-Härtl became disenchanted with the Nazis and volunteered in the Army "as a form of suicide." After turning over the collection to Müllern-Schönhausen, he died in battle. Professor Ernst Deuerlein of the University of Munich, shortly before his death, told me he had authenticated a number of the documents and urged me to see Müllern-Schönhausen. The interview was set up by Dr. Wilfried Daim of Vienna, who had seen some of the items."

compiled in 1946, is stored in a box in the archives of the Hoover Institution. Its content is partly different than the content of the 1959 book. Who donated it to the Hoover Archives is unknown.⁴³

This first typescript contains exactly the same forged HBH letter as reproduced in the book, but with the name "Müllern" cut off. He forgot to do so in the book, by which he revealed his true name, just as he did in the notary document. The forgery in this first typescript are mostly the same as the ones depicted in Die Lösung. But there are also some others. Charles Hamilton showed in his book The Hitler diaries (1991) yet other Hitler forgeries with the HBH "stamp" - what happened to these is unknown.⁴⁴

Where in Die Lösung Dr. Johannes drags a suitcase with a "magical" mandrake with him, which he found in a ruined cellar, in this first version he's dragging a suitcase with the whole HBH collection with him. He buries it in a cellar to restore it later. The new book, with its revolutionary content, that was announced at the end of Die Lösung, was never published (if ever written at all). Probably because Die Lösung didn't sell well. Die Lösung was a self-published work, and we tend to believe that Hans Müllern's legacy consisted of stacks of unsold copies, as packets of five of these were anno 2019 offered on e-Bay.

At the top, there are several sharing and search icons: Google, Google (2), Personaliseer je bro..., randusp1, Aanbevolen websites, Gelimiteerd uit In..., and Geimporteerd. Below the title is a photograph showing a stack of five books tied with yellow bands. To the left of the price, it says "EUR 59,00" and "oder Preisvorschlag". To the right, it says "Aus Österreich" and "Keine Angaben zum Versand".

But, even though the book wasn't a bestseller, the forged documents presented in this work as authentic were used by a number of historians as basis for a number of theories about Hitler. Until his death Geschichtsphilosoph (Philosopher of history) Hans Müllern/Dr. Johannes enjoyed their visits.⁴⁵

45 He was at least twice visited and consulted by the historian Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke, in 1978 and 1991.

The author's copy of Das Rätsel was once owned by the historian Nicholas Goodrick-Clarke (1953-2012), has this dedication by Müllern-Schönhausen in it.

Only obscure biographers and historians with the Bredius syndrome⁴⁶ take Die Lösung seriously. The first of these was Wilfried Daim.⁴⁷ He published his book Der Mann der Hitler sein Ideen gab in 1958 and included documents from Müllern in it. Daim must have seen the first version, because Die Lösung appeared in 1959. Daim stated in a later edition many of the Müllern's documents were fakes, but precisely those documents which supported Daim's theories were of course authentic – according to Daim.⁴⁸

Among one of the last to visit “Dr. Johannes” was Dr. Wilfried Kugel. He went in 1984 and 1989 to Müllern, as he was researching the 'clairvoyant' Hanussen.⁴⁹ According to Müllern Hanussen had given Hitler a mandrake who influenced Hitler in an occult way. Müllern claimed that this mandrake formed part of the HBH collection and was in his possession.

Dr. Kugel recalled in 2018 his visit to Dr. Johannes:

“I first visited him on August 14, 1984 in 1090 Vienna, 9th District, Pulverturmstraße 6.

Müllern, probably already older than 60 (small, stocky, somewhat corpulent, gray hair), welcomed me and my companion very kindly in a spacious, very old-fashioned apartment (antique furniture, large curtains). He didn't talk about his past or his job.

He was unable to show me any of the HBH collection, which he said was stored in a bank safe. Unfortunately my correspondence with him from that time has apparently not been preserved.

My second visit to him took place in December 1989, at 8000 Munich 60, Polko-Strasse 39.

I had written to him at his old address in Vienna, and that letter had been forwarded. I am enclosing a copy of his wife's reply to my request. Müller and his wife welcomed me, finely dressed, in their apartment, which was furnished in the 1950s style.

At this appointment he presented to me the “originals” of the poems about Hitler allegedly written by Hanussen.

It was bad, slightly yellowed paper, in my assessment originating from the 1950s. It was by no means "parchment", as Müller had claimed on page 152 of his book.

The alleged "poems" of Hanussen (pages 137 and 155 and following) were handwritten print letters. This handwriting seems to be the same as that on page 88 (above) of Müllern's book.

The photo and the newspaper article on page 137 in the Müllern book are certainly forged. During my extensive research I couldn't trace the mentioned article that allegedly was published in the "Ostdeutsche Rundschau" of January 7, 1933. Likewise, the photo of Hitler with a mandrake on page 148 is forged.

If the edified statement by RA⁵⁰ Dr. Leopold Pauly [the Viennese notary] from May 7th, 1953, published on page 153-154 is authentic, then the mandrake story must have been concocted before that date.⁵¹ I also consider the alleged letters of an "SS officer E_" (page 170 and following) to be completely faked.

I don't know anything about the curriculum vitae of Müllern."⁵²

51 The notary document is in all likelihood authentic; yet it only proves that Müllern appeared on that date at the notary's office, with a capsule.

The legacy

The "HBH-collection" (HBH Sammlung) ended up in the Bavarian Main State Archive (Bayerische Hauptstaatsarchiv, BHSA) seven years after Hans Müllern's death. It was stored for many years, without being archived (i.e. mentioned in the archive catalogue). Of course, the manner in which it came into the possession of the state archives was again Müllerian.

His widow, Thea Hacklberger-Müllern, received an estate tax assessment in 2003, based on an article that had appeared in Wiener, an Austrian men's magazine, in 1989, which estimated the value of the collection at millions.^{53, 54}

Although doubts about its authenticity had already arisen in a preliminary investigation (possibly the 1990 investigation involving Charles Hamilton, who declared it fake^{55, 56}), the collection was seized in 2003 and thus came into the possession of the tax authorities, who immediately passed it on to the state archives.⁵⁷

After determining that it was fake, the tax issue disappeared, but the collection remained in the possession of the archives. Unarchived, therefore unbeknownst to the public. So for a long time gullible historians and biographers continued to use Müllern's book Die Lösung des Rätsels Adolf Hitler as a reliable source.

The reason for the non-archiving of the HBH collection lay in the main purpose of the Bavarian Main State Archive: to archive official state documents.

Dealing with estates, donated private collections of papers and objects took second place and only portions of these were sometimes archived if they matched - or contained interesting documents from - existing records.⁵⁸

Views on this and the definition of "corresponding" and "interesting" shifted over time, and in 2022 the HBH collection was also archived: "The maintenance of quasi-secret special holdings, withheld from the public, of the protection and retention periods regulated by archival law is incompatible with the task of public archives."⁵⁹

Along with other items attributed to Hitler (authentic or not), the collection was placed in the File "BayHStA, Sammlung HBH et al." and thus finally made available for research.

His last swindle

On March 3, 2018, almost thirty years after his death, Dr. Johannes reemerges in the Austrian press. A handgun allegedly owned by Marlene Dietrich is auctioned by the Viennese auction house Dorotheum.

The seller, a woman, tells that her man was gifted the gun by Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen, as thanks for his help when he, Dr. Johannes, had been very ill.

Dr. Johannes had told her husband that Marlene Dietrich had given him this gun as a reward for the German lessons he gave her, "because she couldn't go on stage with her dialect."⁶⁰

Whatever the true provenance of this gun might be: Marlene Dietrich had studied at a private school and had learned both English and French at the age of 12. It is almost unthinkable that she spoke a German dialect. She performed already on stages in Germany,⁶¹ when Dr. Johannes was nineteen years old and entered the shady part of the world stage in Vienna, as a Truppenführer of the Austrian radical monarchists

Some of Müllern's lies

The “Hitler” oil paintings, watercolors, drawings and poem shown by Müllern in Die Lösung: <https://www.droog-mag.nl/hitler/1959/fakes-from-dr-johannes-von-muellern-schoenhausen.html>

The Hitler paintings – about the collection and destruction of Hitler made paintings etcetera

The following is complete nonsense; Goebbels was not involved at all in the attempts of the NSDAP Hauptarchiv to trace and register Hitler's watercolors, drawings and sketches. The NSDAP Hauptarchiv traced three oilpaintings (which are in all likelihood fakes), some fifty watercolors and no posters at all.⁶²

Pages 72-73: “At this point in time the Reich Chancellery began on behalf of Dr. GOEBBELS to buy back the Führer's pictures. Agents appeared in Austria, allegedly to buy the work for a to be founded ADOLF HITLER MUSEUM! In reality, however, in order to eliminate these witnesses of a pseudo-artistry - which could easily lead to a huge embarrassment.

The action was carried by party organizations, without the general public being well informed about it. It had considerable success, as the Reichs Chancellery paid up to 20,000 reichsmark for an oil painting.

49 Oil paintings, 63 watercolors and 108 poster drafts, technical drawings, pencil sketches and so on were collected in just a few weeks. Not everything had to be bought because some fanatical partisans donate their – until then carefully guarded - "treasures" with joy and without consideration for free. (...)

The leader of this action, a hunchbacked, somewhat overgrown dwarf named B. - allegedly a friend of HITLER and apostle with party number 11 – supposedly already embezzled some of the objects at that time. For this he had, years later, to face a party trial. In any case, several pieces that were collected in this first action, reappeared in later years.

When these “treasures” arrived in Berlin, GOEBBELS wanted to burn them, after a perfunctory inspection. But HITLER - who was still convinced of the value of his creations and struggled desperately to save each piece from destruction, succeeded in saving about four dozen oil paintings, watercolors and drawings. All others were put in the oven by GOEBBELS.

62 Appears from files in NS 26, Bundesarchiv, Berlin.

The remaining pieces were put in a fireproof cabinet in the Propaganda Minister's private apartment. About their further use they would later decide. GOEBBELS might have hoped that the Führer, whilst in a good mood, would agree in the annihilation of these last witnesses of his amateur artist's past.”⁶³

About the amount of artworks made by Hitler...

Dr. Johannes presented utter nonsense. Hitler never made oil paintings, and never mentioned any numbers of watercolors/drawings made by him. The ca. 30 Hitlers bought by the NSDAP-HA were collected in München, and remained in safes in Bavaria until the end of April, 1945. Some of these ended up in Bolzano, the others were probably destroyed or stolen. Some of them might still be in private property.

Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen, Page 77-78: “On the occasion of a cozy get-together for the “old fighters” in the MÜNCHNER Bürgerbräukeller in 1938, HITLER, when asked, stated that he had painted around 100 oil paintings and around 180 watercolors.⁶⁴ The Reich Chancellery bought 196 of these approximately 280 paintings, which were definitely destroyed.

Most of these were burned by Dr. GOEBBELS himself - the remainder perished during the fire in and bombing of the Propaganda Ministry and his home.”⁶⁵

After this Dr. Johannes writes that more collections of Hitlers paintings existed, one owned by Martin Bormann (“beim Brand der Reichskanzlei mit Sicherheit vernichtet” (with certainty destroyed in the Reichskanzlei fire)), the other by Heinrich Himmler (“verloren gegangen, (...) nahezu sicher mit einem Totalverlust” (lost, almost certainly completely lost)). And then he tells that Goebbels didn't find ca. 70 paintings. Most of these were destroyed too. The remaining ones are those in his collection, which he inherited from B., the HBH from the stamps: Hans Bleyer-Härtl.

Yeah, sure.

64 It's highly improbable that Hitler said anything like this. The meeting Dr. Johannes is talking about was Hitler's traditional annual speech in the Munich Bürgerbräukeller, November 8, 1938. This speech was recorded and the text was published in the Völkischer Beobachter, 10-11-1938. A summary was published in: Max Domarus. Hitler. Reden und Proklamationen 1932 bis 1945. Kommentiert von einem deutschen Zeitgenossen. Pamminger & Partner, Leonberg, 1988 (4th edition; 1st edition 1973), pages 966-969. Neither in this speech nor in any other speech in 1932-1945 Hitler said anything about his past activities as an art painter.

Hitler working for an architect

Die Lösung des Rätsel's page 107:

"Architectural drawing with floor plan, made by HITLER on order of architect FLORIAN MÜLLER, Vienna 13, Penzingerstraße 115 for a planned villa construction in Penzingerstrasse. Size 20:30, perfect condition. Collector's stamp on the front. Made around 1911."

According to ADOLF HITLER, this is the only remaining architectural drawing from the period he worked in the building construction."

In the Lehmann's 1911 (the Vienna address book) Baumeister Florian Müller is listed on the given address,⁶⁶ but this proves of course nothing – as Dr. Johannes could have picked any architect listed in the Lehmanns 1911. This address book consists of two parts. Part one is a listing of all companies, part two is a listing of all residents who are the owner or main inhabitant of a house.

It's highly likely that when Dr. Johannes published his book in 1959, 'Baumeister' Müller was no longer among the living.

That Von Müllern-Schönhausen's book existed at all remained unknown to most people, until John Toland in his bestseller Hitler biography (1977) mentioned it. As far as is known neither Florian Müller nor his possible employees in 1911 were ever interviewed about Hitler-the-alleged-apprentice-architect. The only source remains Dr. Johannes.

Hitler's "escape"

At the end of his book Dr. Johannes presents six theories about Hitler's death. He starts with a distortion of the official version, "version 1". According to Dr. Johannes Hitler shot Eva Braun and then himself. After which both were burned in the garden of the Reichskanzlei.⁶⁷

As far as is known Eva Braun wasn't shot, she poisoned herself. But whatever happened – it was late 1945 already clear that both were quite dead.⁶⁸ But because Stalin, whose forces had seized the charred remains of Hitler and Braun, withheld all information regarding the autopsy and identification of the bodies, rumours about an escape of Hitler persisted.⁶⁹

In 1956 the German authorities, after years of intensive research, issued the death certificates of Adolf Hitler and Eva Braun's death.⁷⁰ And finally, in 1995 after the Russians opened their secret archives, all details about the autopsies in 1945 and ultimate fate of the bodies became fully known.⁷¹

This all didn't stop numerous people, for all kinds of reasons, to launch theories in which Hitler didn't kill himself on April 30, 1945. Five of such theories are presented by Dr. Johannes. He makes it look that these theories originate from other people, but it seems that all were his own concoctions.

Version 2

Hitler left at 14.30 hours, April 30, 1945, the Reichskanzlei. He went to the launch basis of V-rockets on the inner court of the Reichskanzlei and was never seen again.

68 On November 1, 1945 Hugh Trevor-Roper gave a press conference in which he outlined the conclusions of his inquiry about the fate of Hitler. "His investigations showed, he said, that Hitler had committed suicide at about 3.30 pm on April 30 1945, and that Eva Braun had died with him." In 1947 the findings of Trevor Roper were published in the many times reprinted The Last Days of Hitler (source: Ada Petrova and Peter Watson. The Death of Hitler, 1995, page 17). See also:

"The Supreme Headquarters control party at Flensburg, Germany, has been told by a Russian general that Hitler died on May 1 from a lethal injection administered by his personal physician and the body was then burned." Dungog Chronicle, New South Wales, 29-05-1945. Even though the injection part of this story is incorrect, this Russian general could only have leaked this story if he had known that the charred remains of Hitler had been found and identified.

Dr. Johannes: "If one learns that the problem of getting people into the air with a V-missile and landing safely at a predetermined point had already been solved at that time and had been tried repeatedly by a well-known German female aviator, then this version had a higher probability value."

He says this story was told by an Austrian who formed part of Hitler's personal security detail and had been present at the Reichskanzlei until it was conquered by the Russians.

And, if the above wasn't bizarre enough, according to Dr. Johannes this witness described a Hitler that was drinking, smoking and eating meat. So, again according to Dr. Johannes, the Hitler who disappeared in a V-rocket wasn't Hitler at all, but a double, because Hitler had died of his injuries two months after the murder attempt of July 20, 1944.

On top of this insanity Dr. Johannes then states that this double attempted to escape not in a V-rocket, but with Martin Bormann in a tank. According to Dr. Johannes Bormann died in this escape attempt – and what happened to the double is unknown.⁷²

What's the truth in all this? A number of manned V-1s were produced and Nazi pilot Hanna Reitsch allegedly made some test flights in it.⁷³ But the V-1 was not a rocket, it was a small plane with a pulse jet engine. There was no rocket launch basis in the Reichskanzlei. Bormann did make an escape attempt in which tanks were involved. As he saw his way blocked he committed suicide. His skeleton was found near the Reichstag on December, 7/8, 1972 and positively identified.⁷⁴

Hitler was rescued from the Reichskanzlei by Nazi commando Otto Skorzeny, transported to Spain, and supposedly living in a heavily guarded Andalusian castle ever since.⁷⁵

Now Otto Skorzeny was located in Southern Germany at the time of the fall of Berlin. He surrendered on May 16 1945 to the US Army.⁷⁶ Why would he have surrendered if Hitler and he were in safety in Spain?

Version 4

“Despite all denials, the Russians got hold of HITLER alive and brought him to MOSCOW, where he is said to have played a major role in the outbreak and implementation of the Cold War as advisor to the communist Central Committee on Western Affairs.”⁷⁷

Yeah, sure.

Version 5

Dr. Johannes: “The Führer managed to survive the end of the Third Reich and the first months of the post-war chaos in a hidden cellar of the Reich Chancellery. With the help of former party friends he is said to have escaped to ARABIA in 1946, where he is said to have led anti-Western and anti-Israelite actions to this day together with his former protégé, the Grand Mufti of JERUSALEM.”⁷⁸

It is somewhat hard to imagine that Hitler could have survived for months in the by the Soviets controlled Reichskanzlei. It also hard to imagine that Hitler would have sought refuge in “Arabia”, which was in 1946 largely controlled by the United Kingdom.

Version 6

"Perhaps the most interesting unofficial version reports that in March 1945 a well-known cosmetic surgeon was brought to BERLIN in a special aircraft to make the Führer's face unrecognizable through an operation. His reward would be "a random bullet" when leaving the Reichskanzlei and a million Reichsmarks for his next of kin.

According to reports, however, the Führer was so impressed by both the professional qualities and the national convictions of the man - who strictly refused to receive payment - that he renounced the immediate execution and only made him promise to kill himself if in danger of torture.

According to this version, the Führer would live under a false name, equipped with real papers, a guaranteed unrecognizable visage and certainly the corresponding cash somewhere in Germany or Austria - that is, in the middle of us.

The surgeon, on the other hand, is said to have shot himself in the late autumn of 1945 - when the Allied authorities began to investigate the traces of the various rumors."⁷⁹

We're at a loss why Dr. Johannes thought this last theory was one of the most interesting. Nobody of Hitler's inner circle ever mentioned anything about Hitler undergoing cosmetic surgery.

Even though he states that these "alternative facts"⁸⁰ are all highly unlikely,⁸¹ Dr. Johannes launched them anyhow. By doing so, he joined the ranks of those responsible for the production of many idiotic books and tv "documentaries" about Hitler's alleged escape; History Channel's series Hunting Hitler being the saddest exemple so far.⁸²

And what about the FBI reports?

Mainly because of the unwillingness of the Soviet Union to reveal the true fate of Hitler, in the direct post war years rumors about Hitler's "escape" were persistent. Many alleged sightings of Hitler were reported to the FBI. After investigating these sightings, the FBI shut down its Hitler investigation in 1947, as there were no grounds for assuming the sightings were true.⁸³

Fooled by the lies

Ernst Deuerlein and John Toland

Hitler biographer John Toland:

"Müllern-Schönhausen's book, Die Lösung des Rätsels Adolf Hitler, a confusing hodgepodge of fact and fantasy. At the same time I am convinced that his collection of original Hitler documents, artifacts and paintings is, for the most part, genuine. Although he took me to the Vienna bank where the documents are stored and made photo copies of a number of the items, he did not show the originals. He said he was given the items by Hans Bleyer-Härtl, an Austrian Nazi who was the lawyer for the Dolfuss murderers. After the Anschluss, Bleyer-Härtl became disenchanted with the Nazis and volunteered in the Army "as a form of suicide." After turning over the collection to Müllern-Schönhausen, he died in battle.⁸⁴

Professor Ernst Deuerlein of the University of Munich, shortly before his death, told me he had authenticated a number of the documents and urged me to see Müllern-Schönhausen. The interview was set up by Dr. Wilfried Daim of Vienna, who had seen some of the items."⁸⁵

Toland also presented several poems clearly not written by Hitler as authentic Hitler poetry. As a source Toland is quite useless.

Ernst Deuerlein was praised by Anton Joachimsthaler in Hitlers Weg began in München as a very good historian.⁸⁶ Apparently Müllern succeeded in convincing Deuerlein too in believing the authenticity of the HBH collection.

Birgit Schwarz

This German-Austrian art historian wrote:

"A sketch from 1911 in the Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen collection, which Hitler is said to have made "on order of the architect Florian Müller, Vienna 13, Penzingerstraße 115" suggests that he made his livelihood increasingly through architectural drawings."⁸⁷

She then adds:

"This is followed by a story that - so contextualized - gains in plausibility and credibility: shortly before his death, the architect and urban planner Max Fabiani (1865-1962) reported in an interview that Hitler had worked in his office. Hitler had been a draftsman for a little more than three months in 1912 [164] Hitler introduced himself at random, without a recommendation, and he, Fabiani, hired him. " (...)

The newcomer, according to Fabiani, did quite well at first. After initial sympathy, however, he dismissed him because of stubbornness, constant changes of opinion, poor performance and "because he was too weak". " (...)

The fact that no further sources can be found doesn't speak against Fabiani's credibility, because there are very few sources for the year 1912. (165) In this case there is even a strong argument in favor of the correctness. Fabiani's story provides, for the first time, a plausible explanation for the fact that Hitler wrote in Mein Kampf that he had moved to Munich in the spring of 1912, a year before he actually did so."⁸⁸

87 Birgit Schwarz. Geniewahn. Hitler und die Kunst. Böhlau Verlag, Wien / Köln / Weimar, 2009. Page 63.
"Dass er seinen Lebenserwerb verstärkt durch Architekturzeichnungen bestritten hat, legt eine Skizze von 1911 in der Sammlung Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen nahe, die Hitler "im Auftrag des Baumeisters Florian Müller, Wien 13, Penzingerstraße 115" gefertigt haben soll.'

88 Schwarz, pages 64-65. "Hier schließt sich eine Erzählung an, die – so kontextualisiert – an Plausibilität" und Glaubwürdigkeit gewinnt: Der Architekt und Stadtplaner Max Fabiani (1865-1962) berichtete kurz vor seinem Tod in einem Interview, Hitler habe 1912 für etwas mehr als drei Monate als Zeichner in seinem Büro gearbeitet. [164] Hitler habe sich auf gut Glück, ohne Empfehlung, vorgestellt und er, Fabiani, habe ihn eingestellt." (...) Der Neuling, so Fabiani, habe sich zunächst auch recht gut angestellt. Nach anfanglicher Sympathie habe er ihn jedoch wegen Starrsinns, laufender Meinungsänderungen, geringer Leistungsfähigkeit und "weil er zu matt war" wieder entlassen." (...) Dass sich keine weiteren Quellen finden lassen, spricht nicht gegen die Glaubwürdigkeit Fabianis, denn die Quellenlage für das Jahr 1912 ist insgesamt denkbar schlecht.(165) In diesem Fall gibt es sogar ein starkes Argument, das für die Richtigkeit spricht. Fabianis Geschichte liefert nämlich erstmalig eine plausible Erklärung dafür, dass Hitler seinen umzug nach München in Mein Kampf auf das Frühjahr 1912 damit ein Jahr vorverlegt haben"

To start with Schwarz's last remark: all Hitler experts agree that Hitler lied about the year he left Vienna, because of the problems he had with the Austrian authorities regarding his conscription, early 1913.

Then, she believes Von Müllerns remarks from 1959 because an architect allegedly claimed in 1962 that he had been Hitler's employer in 1912.

Max Fabiani (who's indeed listed in Lehmanns 1912) was when he stated this ca. 97 years old. He did so to the Italian journalist Armando Stefani, who published it in: L'uomo che licenziò Hitler. La Nazione, June 2, 1966. Fabiani was dead by then.

A statement about somebody who supposedly had worked for three months for him, fifty years earlier, published four years after the death of this witness, without any documentation, is not something any judge would accept. And no historian with any common sense should accept it too.

The most likely explanation is that Fabiani (or Stefani) built these fabrications on the concoctions of Von Müllern-Schönhausen. And Birgit Schwarz not even considered this very logical explanation – as it didn't fit her theories. Schwarz also stated that Hitler had worked as a 'Dekorationsmaler' in the Kunsthistorisches Museum Wien – for which there's too no evidence at all.

Brigitte Hamann not fooled by the architect apprentice lies

In Hitlers Wien (1996) by Brigitte Hamann, page 282:

“Of the many legends about H.'s [Hitler's] time in Vienna only a few examples are given here. There's no evidence in the sources at all that H. at some point, certainly not as stated in 1912, worked as a draftsman in the architectural firm of Max Fabiani worked. This legend goes back to an interview with Fabiani in a Florentine newspaper in 1966 with the lurid title “L'uomo che licenziò Hitler” (The man who sacked Hitler).”⁸⁹

Diese Legende geht auf ein Interview Fabianis in einer Florentiner Zeitung 1966 zurück mit dem reißerischen Titel “L'uomo che licenziò Hitler”(Der Mann, der Hitler entließ). (...) [49]”

Wolfram Pyta

Wolfram Pyta, writer of Hitler. Der Künstler als Politiker und Feldherr. Eine Herrschaftsanalyse (2015) even enlarged Schwarz's misconceptions:

"It can also be assumed that Hitler already had certain professional experience in the field of architectural painting and decorative art during his time in Vienna."⁹⁰

As sources he mentions Schwarz, Fabiani and, rather amazingly, Karl Leidenroth.⁹¹ The last one, an 'academic' painter had helped the Viennesse police in the Reinhold Hanisch investigation in 1936. But Leidenroth told nothing about Hitler working at an architect's office or as a Dekorationsmaler working for Hermann Ritschel, the restaurator of the Kunsthistorisches Museum. Yet Pyta states:

"A testimony of the academic painter Karl Leidenroth, who was employed by Ritschel as a restorer in 1910, which has so far received little attention from research, shows that Hitler was connected to Ritschel."⁹²

No, this testimony doesn't do so. This is the relevant passage from Leidenroth's statements (he gave two) in 1936:

"I got to know the present day Chancellor Adolf Hitler before the war, I think so in 1910, when he applied for admission to the Academy of Fine Arts. Apparently Hitler wanted to acquire a recommendation from the then court restorer Prof. Ritschel, who worked in the court museums at the time, and for this purpose he brought a large portfolio with drawings and watercolors with him. At that time I was employed by Prof. Ritschel as a restorer and through this came into contact with Hitler. I still remember today that Hitler only painted old Viennese buildings in watercolors, all of a smaller format."⁹³

90 Wolfram Pyta. Hitler. Der Künstler als Politiker und Feldherr. Eine Herrschaftsanalyse. Siedler, München, 2015. Page 88. "Es ist darüber hinaus anzunehmen, dass Hitler in seiner Wiener Zeit bereits gewisse Berufserfahrungen auf dem Gebiet der Architekturmalerie und Dekorationskunst gesammelt hat."

91 Pyta, 88-89.

92 Ibidem – "Ein bislang von der Forschung wenig beachtes Zeugnis des akademischen Malers Karl Leidenroth, der im Jahr 1910 bei Ritschel als Restaurator angestellt war, belegt, dass Hitler mit Ritschel in Verbindung stand."

93 Karl Leidenroth. Statement to Viennese police, 20-11-1936. NS 26/2599-25, Bundesarchiv, Berlin. "Ich habe den heutigen Reichskanzler Adolf Hitler vor dem Kriege, gläublich im Jahre 1910 dadurch kennengelernt, dass sich um Aufnahme in die Akademie der bildenden Künste bewarb. Hitler wollte scheinbar eine Empfehlung des damaligen Hofrestaurators Prof. Ritschel, damals in den Hofmuseen tätig, erwerben und brachte zu diesem Zwecke eine grosse Mappe mit Zeichnungen und Aquarellen. Ich selbst war damals bei Prof. Ritschel als Restaurator angestellt und kam dadurch mit Hitler in Berührung. Ich erinnere mich noch heute, dass Hitler ausschliesslich Altwiener Gebäude in Aquarelle malte, alle von kleinerem Formate."

This statement makes it clear that, according to Leidenroth, who lived in the Männerheim in Vienna in the same time as Hitler, Hitler only intended to visit Ritschel. But, just as he in 1908 intended to visit Alfred Roller, he never did so.

See: Ullrich, Adolf Hitler. Die Jahre des Aufstiegs, page 41.

How reliable this statement is, is another question. It is documented that Hitler tried to enter the Art Academy in 1907 and 1908. For that he tried it again, or thought about it in 1910, is only one source: Leidenroth, twenty six years later.

Harald Sandner

Harald Sandner compiled Hitler. Das Itinerar (Hitler. The Itinerary),⁹⁴ a massive work of 2430 pages, in which he tries to reconstruct where Hitler was, every day of his life. It's an impressive study. But unfortunately some of Müllern's concoctions have corrupted his work.

Conclusion

Nothing stated by Hans Müllern / Dr. Johannes von Müllern-Schönhausen is to be believed, unless there's hard evidence from other, independent sources, that he was telling the truth.

The truth is that Hans Müllern was a failed poet, a Nazi propagandist and a con artist, whose concoctions corrupted too many books and maybe even history itself.

The true goal of the book was to present Müllern's true message. He hid this in true Nazi style in a mix of concoctions and pseudo philosophy:⁹⁶

- Hitler had been a genius, but, because being half Jewish, had failed.⁹⁷
- The problems which caused Hitler's rise to power still exist and demand an antidemocratic approach.⁹⁸

Sondervorstellung des Deutschen Theaters (March 25, 1938)

"Berechnung" — "Deutsche Treue"

Der Verein „Deutsches Theater“ gab anlässlich des Umbruches in der Ostmark eine Sondervorstellung und brachte im Josefssaal das Trauerspiel „Berechnung“ von Hans Bleyer-Härtl und das Drama „Deutsche Treue“ von Theodor Körner zur Aufführung. Obmann Rudolf Heinzel eröffnete die Feier mit einer herzlichen Rede. Dramaturg Hans Müllern von Schönhausen sprach anschließend von der schweren Kampfzeit des Theaters und stellte dem Publikum Schriftsteller Hans Bleyer-Härtl, den Autor des Stückes „Berechnung“ als Parteigenossen, Mensch, Frontsoldaten und Bergsteiger in warmen Worten vor. Das Trauerspiel „Berechnung“ handelt von einem Maler, der nur an sich denkt und, im Größenwahn ein Genie zu sein, jede volksverbundene Menschlichkeit verloren hat, das Leber zweier sich für ihn aufopfernden Frauen zerstört, um endlich durch deren Untergang zu erkennen, daß er als Mann nicht weiterhin vom Vermögen einer Frau leben könne, sondern die Verpflichtung habe, selbst einem Verdienst nachzugehen.

In der Pause hielt Direktor und Regisseur Karl Zeman eine kurze Festrede und trug den Festprolog von Hans Bleyer-Härtl vor, der mit Beifall ausgenommen wurde. In den beiden Stücken spielten Maria Fidel, Mario Kayser, Magret Angeli, Adolf Böhmer, Lothar Heidenreich, Richard Vertan, Eduard Hilzer, Clement Böhm, Fritz Liebhart und Leo Böhacker im einigen Willen Bestes zu leisten. Hervorzuheben ist das Können und die Fähigkeiten von Lothar Heidenreich. Das Publikum lohnte dem Autor und den Schauspielern mit reichem Beifall.⁹⁹

Dieser Tags wurden der Wiener Schriftsteller Dr. Hans Müllern und der Gemeindesekretär von Maishofen bei Zell am See, Sebastian Pichler, unter dem Verdacht verhaftet, zahlreichen ungarischen DPs [Displaced persons] durch betrügerische Machinationen die Erwerbung der österreichischen Staatsbürgerschaft ermöglicht zu haben.

Die umfangreichen Schwindeleien flogen dadurch auf, daß der ungarische DP Zoltan Fischer, eine Schieber von Großformat, einem anderen Ungarn, der sich jetzt in einem salzburgischen Flüchtlingslager aufhält, minderwertige Anzugstoffe um 115.000[Schilling] anhängte und sodann flüchtete. Der betrogene ungarische DP, der einen Schaden von 40.000 S zu verzeichnen hatte, erstattete die Anzeige. Erhebungen ergaben, daß Zoltan Fischer großspurig wie ein ungarischer Magnat ausgetreten ist, aber bei seiner Flucht im eleganten Luxusauto, Marke Buick, 200.000 S Steuerschulden hinterlassen hat. Seine Flucht per Auto war nur möglich, weil er die österreichische Staatsbürgerschaft, einen nagelneuen Reisepaß und die nötigen Ausweispapiere für seinen Wagen besaß.

Die Staatsbürgerschaft hatte Zoltan Fischer auf Grund einer gemeindeamtlichen Bescheinigung erhalten, wonach er 1930 bis 1938 in Maishofen bei Zell am See wohnte, aber dann vom NS-Regime aus rassischen Gründen vertrieben wurde. Zoltan Fischer aber hatte niemals in dem hübschen salzburgischen Gebirgsort gewohnt. Weitere Erhebungen ergaben, daß der Gemeindesekretär von Maishofen, Sebastian Pichler im Auftrag des Wiener Schriftstellers Doktor Hans Müllern falsche Aufenthaltsbescheinigungen aus Originalpapier und mit dem Original-Gemeindestempel von Maishofen herstellte.

Dr. Müllern, eine verkrachter Schriftsteller, hatte in seiner Wiener Wohnung eine "Beratungsstelle" für Ausländer eingerichtet. Gegen Bezahlung von 5000 bis 20.000 S konnten die ungarischen DPs die für den Erwerb der Staatsbürgerschaft notwendige Ausenthaltsbescheinigung bekommen. Dr. Müllern und Sebastian Pichler teilten sich den Erlös. Den für die Verleihung der Staatsbürgerschaft zuständigen Stetten ist es angeblich nicht aufgefallen daß ausgerechnet das kleine Gebirgsdorf Maishofen eine ganze Anzahl „rassisches Verfolgter“ zusammenbrachte, die alle früher in Ungarn gelebt hatten.¹⁰⁰ Die Lösung, pages 72-73 "Zu diesem Zeitpunkt begann die Reichskanzlei über Auftrag Dr. GÖBBELS die Bilder des Füters zurückzukaufen. Agenten erschienen in Österreich um – angeblich für ein, in Gründung stegehendes ADOLF HITLERMUSEUM die Gemälde zu erwerben! In Wirklichkeit jedoch, um diese Zeugen eines Scheinkünstlertums – die leicht zu einer Riesenblamage führen konnten – zu beseitigen.

Die Aktion wurde im Rahmen der Parteiorganisationen durchgeführt, ohne daß die breite Öffentlichkeit viel davon erfahren hätte und brachte ganz ansehnliche Ereignisse – zumal sich die Reichskanzlei nicht lumpen ließ und für ein Ölbild bis zu RM 20.000.- zahlte.

49 Ölbilder, 63 Aquarelle und 108 Plakatentwürfe, technische Zeichnungen, Bleistiftskizzen und so weiter kamen so in wenigen Wochen zusammen. Nicht alles mußte gekauft werden, da einige fanatische Parteigänger stellten ihre – bis dahin sorgsam gehüteten – "Schätze" mit Freuden und ohne Gegenleistung zur Verfügung. (...)

Der Leiter dieser Aktion, ein buckliger, etwas verwachsener Zwerg namens B. – angeblich ein Dufreund HITLERS und Apostel mit der Parteinummer 11 – soll bereits damals einen Teil der Objekte veruntreut haben. (Wofür) ihm Jahre später ein Parteigerichtsprozeß gemacht wurde. Jedenfalls sind mehrere Stücke aus jener ersten Sammelaktion nachher wieder aufgetaucht.

Als diese "Schätze" in Berlin ankamen, wollte sie GÖBBELS nach flüchtiger Besichtigung sofort eigenhändig verbrennen, doch gelang es HITLER – der von dem Wert seiner Schöpfungen noch immer überzeugt war und um jedes einzelne Stück verzweifelt kämpfte – immerhin an die vier Dutzend Ölbilder, Aquarelle und Zeichnungen zu retten. Alles andere wurde von GÖBBELS in den Ofen gesteckt.

Die verbliebenen Stücke kamen in ein feuerfestes Schrankfach in der Privatwohnung des Propagandasministers. Über ihre weitere Verwendung sollte später einmal von den beiden entschieden werden, wobei GÖBBELS gehofft haben mag, daß der Führer gelegentlich bei guter Laune der Vernichtung aus dieser letzten Zeugen einer dilettantischen Künstlervergangenheit zustummen würde."

Bildern hat die Reichskanzlei 196 angekauft, die mit bestimmtheit vernichtet wurden.

Den größten Teil davon hat Dr. GÖBBELS selbst verbrannt – der Rest ist beim Brand und Bombardement des Propagandaministeriums und seiner Wohnung zugrundegegangen.”

Appendix IV

Die Lösung des Rätsel's Adolf Hitler, pages 234-238.

Warum also hält sich das Gerücht so hartnäckig, daß der Führer noch am Leben ist? Warum wird seinen amtlichen und gerichtlichen Todeserklärungen, die bald in BONN, dann wieder in MÜNCHEN, HAMBURG, WIEN und so weiter erfolgen, so große Bedeutung beigemessen?

Gibt es vielleicht irgendwo so was wie ein schlechtes Gewissen, das uns etwas verheimlichen möchte? Möglicherweise die Tatsache, daß trotz tausender veröffentlichter Worte der Tod des Führers gar nicht so bombensicher und beschlossen ist, wie er bereits 1945 von deutschen und alliierten Stellen hinausposaunt wurde?

Nun — ganz so schlimm ist es auch wieder nicht! Trotzdem lohnt es sich, die beiden offiziellen und die fünf inoffiziellen Versionen seines Verschwindens noch einmal zu rekapitulieren.

[1] Die erste, offizielle Version ist die, daß HITLER nach seiner Trauung mit EVA BRAUN am 29. April 1945 seine Frau und dann sich selbst erschossen hat und daß beider Leichen über seinen ausdrücklichen Befehl im Hof der Reichskanzlei verbrannt wurden. (Darstellung der alliierten Untersuchungskommission gemeinsam .mit den deutschen Behörden.)

[2] Nach der zweiten, mehr offiziösen Version soll der Führer am 30. April 1945, gegen 14.30 Uhr das Gebäude der Reichskanzlei verlassen haben um in der Richtung - der Abschußbasis der V-Raketen im Hof der Reichskanzlei zu verschwinden und nie wieder aufzutauchen.

Wenn man dazu erfährt, daß das Problem, Menschen mit einer V-Rakete in die Luft zu befördern und an einer vorausbestimmten Stelle sicher zu landen, damals bereits gelöst und von einer bekannten deutschen Fliegerin wiederholt ausprobiert worden war, dann bekommt diese Version schon größeren Wahrscheinlichkeitswert.

Dazu kommt, daß der Berichterstatter dieser Version — ein Österreicher — als Mitglied der 20 Mann starken Bewachungstruppe im Sperrkreis A des Führer-hauptquartiers dreiviertel Jahre lang im Vorzimmer HITLERS beschäftigt und bis zum Einmarsch der Russen in der Reichskanzlei anwesend war.

Die einzige Reaktion auf die 1951 erfolgte Veröffentlichung der Version war die, daß man die Verbreitung der betreffenden Illustrierten in der Russenzone auf die Dauer von drei Wochen untersagte. (Also schien man sich der Version I doch nicht ganz sicher zu sein.).

Seltsam ist nur daß der Berichterstatter in wichtigen Details einen ganz anderen HITLER beschrieb, als denjenigen, den wir gekannt haben. Einen HITLER, der mit ziemlicher Leidenschaft Zigaretten rauchte, Bier, Wein, Schnaps und Sekt trank, zu seinen traditionellen Gemüseplatten anständige Stücke Fleisch verschlang, mit EVA BRAUN kaum etwas zu tun hatte und sie auch nicht heiratete.

Das alles würde mit der ersten inoffiziellen Version übereinstimmen, nach der der Führer bereits unmittelbar nach dem Attentat des Grafen Stauffenberg von einem, der — in steter Bereitschaft gehaltenen — Doppelgänger ersetzt worden ist.

HITLER soll damals so viel abbekommen haben, daß er — nicht mehr aktionsfähig — in eine geschlossene Anstalt gebracht werden mußte, wo er zwei Monate später seinen schweren Verletzungen erlag.

Der Doppelgänger — ein gewisser STRASSER (Pseudonym?) soll zwar einen beträchtlichen Aufwand an Schminke, Schnurrbart und Toupe gebraucht, damit aber eine ausgezeichnete Kopie des Führers hingestellt haben. Mit Ausnahme natürlich seiner kleinen Lebensgewohnheiten und Leidenschaften, auf deren Buchstabengetreue Kopierung aber damals, im Trubel der beginnenden Auflösung kein allzugroßes Gewicht mehr gelegt wurde.

Gemeinsam mit MARTIN BORMANN, der ihn — im Sinne der Durchhalteparolen des Führers — streng an der Kandare hielt, soll er dann in letzter Stunde in einem Panzer einen Fluchtversuch unternommen haben, bei dem BORMANN den Tod fand.

Weiters ist über das Schicksal STRASSERS nichts bekannt.

[3] Nach der zweiten, inoffiziellen Version ist HITLER während der Belagerung BERLINS von SKORZENY aus der Reichskanzlei herausgeholt und nach Spanien gebracht worden, wo er seither auf einem abgelegenen andalusischen Schloß unter strengster Bewachung leben soll.

[4] Die dritte, inoffizielle Version besagt, daß die Russen trotz aller Dementis HITLER lebend in die Hand bekommen und nach MOSKAU gebracht haben, wo er als Berater des kommunistischen Zentralkomitees für westliche

Angelegenheiten am Ausbruch und der Durchführung des Kalten Krieges wesentlichen Anteil haben soll.

[5] Nach der vierten, inoffizellen Version ist es dem Führer gelungen in einem versteckten Keller der Reichskanzlei das Ende des Dritten Reiches und die ersten Monate der Nachkriegswirren zu überdauern. Mit Hilfe ehemaliger Parteifreunde soll er dann 1946 nach ARABIEN entkommen sein, wo er angeblich zusammen mit seinem ehemaligen Schützling, dem Großmufti von JERUSALEM, bis zum heutigen Tage die antiwestlichen und antiisraelitischen Aktionen leiten.

[6] Die fünfte und vielleicht interessanteste inoffizielle Version berichtet, daß im März 1945 ein bekannter kosmetischer Chirurg im Sonderflugzeug nach BERLIN geholt wurde, um das Gesicht des Führers durch eine Operation unkenntlich zu machen. Als Lohn sei für den Arzt beim Verlassen der Reichskanzlei eine zufällige Kugel und für seine Hinterbliebenen eine Million Reichsmark vorgesehen gewesen.

Dem Vernehmen nach war jedoch der Führer sowohl von den fachlichen Qualitäten als auch von der nationalen Überzeugung des Mannes — der jede Bezahlung strikt ablehnte — so beeindruckt, daß er auf die sofortige Exekution verzichtete und ihm nur das Versprechen abnahm, sich gegebenenfalls lieber selbst umzubringen, als sich das Geheimnis herauspressen zu lassen.

Nach dieser Version soll also der Führer unter falschem Namen, ausgestattet mit echten Papieren, einer garantiert unkenntlichen Visage und sicherlich den entsprechenden Barmitteln irgendwo in Deutschland oder Österreich — also mitten unter uns — leben.

Der Chirurg hingegen soll sich bereits im Spätherbst 1945 — als die alliierten Behörden begannen, den Spuren der verschiedentlich umlaufenden Gerüchte nachzugehen — erschossen haben.

Sieben verschiedene Versionen! Zugegeben — eine abenteuerlicher wie die andere — doch keine zu abenteuerlich für einen Mann, mit seiner Vergangenheit.

Welche die richtige ist?

Möglicherweise gar keine! Jedenfalls besteht — wie sich die, mit der Untersuchung betrauten Beamten privat äußerten — die 80%ige Wahrscheinlichkeit, daß er auf die eine oder andere Art umgekommen ist!

Und für die restlichen 20% ist eben Wachsamkeit am Platz!

Bekanntlich soll man in der Politik und in der Liebe mit der Verwendung der Wörter „NIEMALS“ und „EWIG“ sehr vorsichtig sein. Trotzdem kann man in diesem Fall wohl mit 100%iger Sicherheit behaupten, daß ADOLF HITLER — wenn er wirklich am Leben sein sollte — niemals wieder eine Chance haben wird!

Angesichts der Tatsache, daß wir von dem Ende des Führers nichts genaues wissen, ist also zu erwarten, daß wir zumindest für die nächsten 20 Jahre Bücher und Broschüren dieses und ähnlichen Inhaltes vorgesetzt erhalten werden. Erst dann dürften sich die Titel etwas ändern und zwar in „DIE KINDER ADOLF HITLERS LEBEN IN PERU“ oder „ADOLF HITLERS SOHN WILL ANSPRÜCHE AN DEUTSCHLAND STELLEN“ usw.

„Mein Vater war Adolf Hitler!“

Wie zur Bestätigung unserer Voraussage ist während der Drucklegung des Buches in einer Wiener Illustrierten ein Artikel unter vorstehendem Titel erschienen, was wir unseren Lesern nicht vorenthalten möchten. Nun kann sich jedermann selbst ausrechnen, wie lange es noch dauern kann, bis die ganze Schar der Kinder, Enkel und Urenkel des Führers mit ihren diversen Ansprüchen auftauchen wird.“

Gerichtssaal – Eine Rekord-Rechnung	Courtroom - A record bill
Man kennt Herrn Wenzel Eder im ganzen Bezirk als einen netten, immer liebenswürdigen Menschen, als einen Junggesellen der das Herz am rechten Fleck hat. Um so überraschender war es gestern, Herrn Eder als Angeklagten vor einem Strafrichter zu sehen. Er soll in einem Kaffeehaus in der Brigittenau in einer Nacht eine Zeche von 161 Schilling gemacht, die Bezahlung aber verweigert haben; Die lustige Nacht war allerdings schon vor zwei Jahren. Aus der Anzeige erfährt man:	Mr Wenzel Eder is known throughout the district as a nice, always amiable person, as a bachelor who has his heart in the right place. It was all the more surprising yesterday to see Mr Eder as a defendant before a criminal court. He is alleged to have made a bill of 161 shillings in a coffee house in Brigittenau one night, but refused to pay; the funny night, however, was two years ago. From the report one learns:
Eines Nachts kam Eber in das Café Wallenstein, wo er mit einem Partner zu schnapsen begann. Zwischendurch wurden die verschiedensten Getränke bestellt. Es wurde lustig drauf los getrunken. Und als sich Herr Eder anschickte, den Heimweg anzutreten, präsentierte man ihm folgende	One night Eber came to the Café Wallenstein, where he started drinking with a partner. In between, a wide variety of drinks were ordered. They drank merrily away. And when Mr. Eder prepared to go home, he was presented with the following bill
Rechnung: 21 Frackerl, 48 Flaschen Bier, 32 Portionen Kaffee, 10 Mokka gespritzt, 1 Mokka zweimal gespritzt und 500 Zigaretten.	21 Frackerl¹⁰², 48 bottles of beer, 32 portions of coffee, 10 coffees with a shot of liquor, 1 coffee with two shots and 500 cigarettes.
Eder behauptete, daß er die Bestellungen nicht gemacht habe, außerdem seien nicht alle aufgeführten Getränke geliefert worden und verweigerte die Bezahlung. Die Folge war eine Anzeige wegen Zechprellerei.	Eder claimed that he had not placed the orders and that not all the drinks listed had been delivered and refused to pay. This resulted in a charge of dining piracy by Müllern.
Angekl. Eber: Selbstverständlich habe ich nicht gezahlt. Meine Zeche hat nur dreißig Schilling ausgemacht. Das hätte ich auch gezahlt. Ich war angeheiterter und das wurde von den anderen ausgenützt.	The accused Eber: Of course I did not pay. My bill was only thirty shillings. I would have paid that as well. I was tipsy and the others took advantage of that.
Richter Dr. Rösler: Was haben Sie denn konsumiert?	Judge Dr. Rösler: What did you consume?
Angekl.: Ich habe eine Liste da. (Liest:) Drei Mokka, dann wieder drei Mokka, zwei Flaschen Bier, vier Flaschen Bier, dann wieder vier Flaschen Bier, eine Schachtel Sport zu 100-Stück, noch eine Schachtel und wieder eine Schachtel und ein »Frackerl«. Das ganze hat 30 Schilling und 20 Groschen ausgemacht. Ich habe schon oft Zechen bis zu 50 Schilling gemacht und habe sie am Ersten stets pünktlich bezahlt.	Accused: I have a list here. (Reads:) Three coffee, then three coffee again, two bottles of beer, four bottles of beer, then four bottles of beer again, a box of Sport¹⁰³ at 100 pieces, another box and another box and a "Frackerl". All costed 30 shillings and 20 groschen. I've often done cocktails up to 50 shillings and always paid them on time on the first day [of the month].

Richter: Sehr interessant, daß Sie solche Zechen machen! Angekl. Olgekl.: Ich lebe als Junggeselle die ganze Zeit im Gasthaus. Seit acht Jahren ist das so. Aber es gibt kein Gasthaus auf der Welt, in dem ich nach dem Ersten etwas schuldig wäre. Ich bin nie schuldig. Ich bin bekannt am Grund. Der Wirt soll Zech-Exzeße nicht dulden. Der Cafetier Hans Müllern gibt als Zeuge an, daß er in der Zwischenzeit das Kaffeehaus verkauft habe und Schriftsteller geworden sei. Richter: Was war damals im Lokal los? Zeuge: Herr Eder ist in Begleitung eines anderen Herrn und einer Dame gekommen. Während des Schnapsens wurde von beiden Herren bestellt. Herr Eder erklärte plötzlich: "Stellen S' den anderen auch ein paar Flaschen hin." Er hat dies anwesenden Gäste verwirrt. Angekl.: Es waren ja gar keine da! Richter (zum Zeugen): Und Sie haben geduldet, daß so ein Zechexzeß veranstaltet wird? Zeuge: Was kann ich denn- dagegen tun? Richter: Die Ernstlichkeit der Bestellung bezweifeln! Als seriösem Cafetier muß Ihnen doch auffallen, daß sich ein Gast bei Ihnen in solche Unkosten stürzt.— Außer wenn in der Brüttelau das Zentrum der Finanz wäre. (Heiterkeit). Zeuge: Ich habe Herrn Eber gekannt und wußte, dass er schon größere Zechen gemacht hat. Und schließlich ist bei mir schon eine Zeche von mehr als 200 Schilling gemacht worden. Richter: War der Herr alkoholisiert? Zeuge: Nein. Ich weiß übrigens von ihm, dass er, schon dreißig Krügel Bier getrunken hat, ohne das er ansehert gewesen wäre. Er war genau so ruhig wie vorher. Uebrigens hat er bei einer anderen Gelegenheit mit zwei Männern geschnapst. Dabei sind 41 Mokka konsumiert worden! Zum Schluß hat er aber nur einen Mokka gezahlt. Angekl.: Ich habe schon zweitausend Schilling beim Spiel verloren und habe sofort bar gezahlt. Ich bleibe nie schuldig.	Judge: It is very interesting that you make such bills! Accused: As a bachelor I live in the inn all the time. That has been the case for eight years. But there is no inn in the world where I would owe anything after the first [day of the month]. I'm never in debt. I am known that way. The landlord is not supposed to tolerate drunk excesses. The café owner Hans Müllern states as a witness that he had sold the café in the meantime and had become a writer. Judge: What was going on in the café at that time? Witness: Mr Eder came in the company of another gentleman and a lady. During the drinking both gentlemen ordered. Mr. Eder suddenly declared, "Put a couple of bottles for the others too." He presented this to the other guests. Accused: There were none there at all! Judge (to the witness): And you tolerated such a revelry? Witness: What can I do about it? Judge: Doubt the seriousness of the order! As a respectable café owner, you must have noticed that a guest of yours is throwing himself into such expenses - unless the centre of finance were in Brüttelau. (Laughter). Witness: I knew Mr. Eber and knew that he had already made larger bills. And-after all, a bill of more than 200 shillings has already been made at my place. Judge: Was the gentleman intoxicated? Witness: No. By the way, I know from him that he, he had already drunk thirty mugs of beer without being inebriated. He was just as calm as before. By the way, on another occasion he had a drink with two men. In the process, 41 cofees were consumed! In the end, however, he paid for only one coffee. Accused: I have already lost two thousand shillings at gambling and paid cash immediately. I never remain in debt.

Der Angeklagte wurde mit der Begründung freigesprochen, daß eine Betrugsabsicht nicht vorgelegen sei. Der Chef habe irrtümlich angenommen, daß der Gast auch die übrigen Anwesenden bewirten wollte. Dies war aber in Wirklichkeit nicht der Fall.

The accused was acquitted on the grounds that there was no intention to defraud. The chef had mistakenly assumed that the guest also wanted to entertain the others present. In reality, however, this was not the case.
